Not quite, @neeratanden. UR "on record" opposing working women & men RE #TPP

@johniadarola @AnaKasparian

shadowproof.com/2016/06/25/dem...

However, loyalty to party and the President of the United States trumped conscience and principles.

On top of that, Center for American Progress president Neera Tanden, appointed by Clinton, patronizingly addressed all the Sanders appointees upset with the craven members of the committee.

"I take all your comments, and I think a lot of people around this table oppose the TPP," Tanden said. "I think the issue about the previous amendment was just frankly about the President's position. But I don't take away any of the statements you made. Many of us are in wholehearted agreement with your criticism of TPP and free trade deals."

In fact, the Clinton and DNC chairwoman appointees were not in "wholehearted agreement." They could not be moved to act on their opposition to the TPP in a manner that would show solidarity with working class Americans across the country who have suffered through the staggering impact of destructive trade deals.

> mainstream politics as grotesquely tilted toward the interests of the rich and powerful. To him, Clinton served primarily as a useful stand-in for the failings and compromises of a system he regards as rotten. But many voters who lack a deep familiarity with the assumptions and terminology Sanders uses may not have understand his criticism in this context. When he used terms like "corrupt" and "rigged" and "bought and paid for," they understood these in a much sharper way. Younger voters, who did not form clear views of Clinton in the 1990s, were introduced to her as a literally criminal figure. Clinton is actually viewed less favorably by voters

> A reminder: When you say, "My state is safely blue so I can vote third-party," what you are doing is relying on other voters in your state to produce what you acknowledge is the "safe" outcome so that you can afford yourself the luxury of not having your fingerprints on that result. And dividing voters into two classes—one results-oriented and the other conscience-oriented—is a big ethical problem.

The FBI determined that Clinton brought her Blackberry into a secure area at State, which is prohibited.

> (U//~~FOUO~~) Investigation determined Clinton did not have a computer in her State office, which was located in a Sensitive Compartmented Information Facility (SCIF) on the seventh floor of State headquarters, in an area often referred to as "Mahogany Row."[220,221,222] State Diplomatic Security Service (DS) instructed Clinton that because her office was in a SCIF, the use of mobile devices in her office was prohibited.[223] Interviews of three former DS agents revealed Clinton stored her personal BlackBerry in a desk drawer in DS "Post 1,"[65] which was located within the SCIF on Mahogany Row.[224,225,226] State personnel were not authorized to bring their mobile devices into Post 1, as it was located within the SCIF.[227] According to Abedin, Clinton primarily used her personal BlackBerry or personal iPad for checking e-mails, and she left the SCIF to do so, often visiting State's eighth floor balcony.[228] Former Assistant Secretary of State for DS Eric Boswell stated he never received any complaints about Clinton using her personal BlackBerry inside the SCIF.[229]

This also makes my point nicely -->

> The citizens of industrial democracies continue to value their freedom and their opportunity to participate in the task of self-government. But they also count on their political systems to create circumstances in which they can use their talents and their labor to provide a decent standard of life for themselves and their families. When democratic governments and market systems cannot deliver such prosperity to their citizens, the result is political alienation, a loss of social trust, and increasing conflict across the lines of race, class, and ethnicity. Inclusive prosperity nurtures tolerance, harmony, social generosity, optimism, and international cooperation. And these are essential for democracy itself.

I don't think it's fair that we create our own domestic problems and then ask other nations to pay for it.

You see the adverse incentive problem here right? If we think we can make money off an incursion, we'll do it? that's a serious policy/messaging/moral problem for our foreign policy I think

We have a giant deficit. They have a lot of oil. Most Americans would choose not ■ engage in the world because of that deficit. If we want to continue to engage in the world, gestures like having oil rich countries partially pay us back doesn't seem crazy to me.

Do we prefer cuts to Head Start? Or WIC? Or Medicaid? Because we live in deficit politics, and that's what is happening and will be happening even more.

I have proof glen supported the Iraq war.. can I sort out about that ?

During the lead-up to the invasion, I was concerned that the hell-bent focus on invading Iraq was being driven by agendas and strategic objectives that had nothing to do with terrorism or the 9/11 attacks. The overt rationale for the invasion was exceedingly weak, particularly given that it would lead to an open-ended, incalculably costly, and intensely risky preemptive war. Around the same time, it was revealed that an invasion of Iraq and the removal of Saddam Hussein had been high on the agenda of various senior administration officials long before September 11. Despite these doubts, concerns, and grounds for ambivalence, I had not abandoned my trust in the Bush administration. Between the president's performance in the wake of the 9/11 attacks, the swift removal of the Taliban in Afghanistan, and the fact that I wanted the president to succeed, because my loyalty is to my country and he was the leader of my country, I still gave the administration the benefit of the doubt. I believed then that the president was entitled to have his national security judgment deferred to, and to the extent that I was able to develop a definitive view, I accepted his judgment that American security really would be enhanced by the invasion of this sovereign country.

Mussolini, here, sure sounds like today's Progressive.

> "Fascism entirely agrees with Mr. Maynard Keynes, despite the latter's prominent position as a Liberal. In fact, Mr. Keynes' excellent little book, The End of Laissez-Faire (1926) might, so far as it goes, serve as a useful introduction to fascist economics. There is scarcely anything to object to in it and there is much to applaud."
